Introduction

Hamster Cannon has taken it upon himself to protect the city of Philadelphia from injustice, one tiny animal at a time. He searches for love, friendship, and criminals to plaster with hamsters from his potato gun. Along the way he must battle fiendish criminals such as thieves, drug dealers, jaywalkers, and other animal-themed lunatics, as well as his conscience, personified in Chippy, his stuffed childhood hamster. In the grim darkness of our current times, it is up to Hamster Cannon to judge who lives, and who gets hamstered.

Film overview

Hamster Cannon gets invited to a talk show, Gabbing with Gabby, to show off his outlandish superhero gimmick. He develops a bond with her over the course of a few months but represses his feelings for her because he feels he is incapable of being loved. He goes out of his way to always keep her safe, but when a street-level crook known as Porcupine is revealed to be a member of her TV crew, Hamster Cannon must confront his inner being to make sense of the situation.

Character descriptions

Hamster Cannon

Hamster Cannon begins to film as a lone-wolf vigilante who harbors intense self-hatred. As the film progresses, he opens up to Gabby, while feeling awkward and undeserving of her friendship. He becomes paranoid and angry, eventually turning on her and finding a new thing to hate, rather than himself. He goes from being a stoic vigilante who takes himself too seriously, to an angry man who blames others for his problems.

Gabby Edith

Gabby Edith starts the film searching for entertainment. Not only for her show, but for her life as well. She is smart and friendly but resides in her own world and can be naïve. As the film progresses, she gets increasingly annoyed with Hamster Cannon's attempts to protect her and begins to pull away from him. She goes from doing anything in the name of fun to becoming more reserved and thoughtful about who she surrounds herself with.

Porcupine

Porcupine is a crew member of Gabby's talk show. He begins the film as a creepy guy who minds his own business by day while robbing convenience stores by night. He freaks out Hamster Cannon, who goes digging into his background. By the end of the film, he is killed for being too close to Gabby.

Chippy

Chippy is Hamster Cannon's subconscious, personified in his stuffed childhood hamster. He begins the film by blaming Hamster Cannon for everything bad that has ever happened to him, urging him to continually repent by bringing justice to Philly. As the film progresses, he increases Hamster Cannon's paranoia by verbalizing everything negative about his relationship with Gabby, trying to get him to go back to normal. By the end of the film, he pivots to hating Gabby rather than Hamster Cannon, and the two of them finally get along.

Sequel possibility

Hamster Cannon's arc could end with him being a villain in another hero's story, as he learns to blame others for his problems. He could cause havoc on the TV set or be villainized for his cruel methods of crime-fighting.

Alternatively, the Gabbing with Gabby talk show could include cameos from future heroes and villains alike.
